With Real Intent: A Priceless Gem

Andrew E. Dadson

Keywords
Book of Mormon, Modern Church, Conversion Stories

Abstract
Dadson shares his experience of gaining a testimony of the Book of Mormon while a young teenager at boarding school in Ghana. He was blessed through clean living, studying the Book of Mormon, and paying his tithing.

BYU ScholarsArchive Citation
Available at: https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/jbms/vol12/iss1/12

Just like the deaf really know the price of the gift of hearing and the blind the value of the ability to see, residents of places where unspoiled skies are scarce and highly endangered realize what the curtain of wasted outdoor lighting has taken away from them. Ronald S. Whitehead of Dayton, Ohio who is a retired USAF personnel and has been to Pakistan a couple of times, once wrote to me:

"Seeing the full glory of The Milky Way in a real dark sky is spiritual! You'll know what I mean when you see it. Sad, so few have." This priceless gem that we hold in our possession is this moment of now. Recognizing Today. The day this post goes live, you and I will have experienced 349 days in 2014.

Instead of reacting to the ups and downs of life, we can draw closer to the priceless gem of today. Realizing that through this gem comes our entire experience. In this moment of now, life dances in harmony, from the atoms within our bodies, to our cells and organs, to the planet beneath us, to the furthest star. In this moment of now, life is absolutely incredible.